If you applied for a Doctoral degree program or a Master's degree program, and you are been invited for an interview; I say a big Congratulations!

The fact that you are invited for an interview implies that the admission panel of the University deems it fit that you are eligible and capable of embarking on the degree program at their university.

Furthermore, the conduct of interview will enhance the panel to carry out a goodness-of-fit test on you, which will enable you to demonstrate the drive/ passion to earn the degree within the stipulated time (time conscious is crucial for earning a degree).

It is pertinent to note that you cannot envisage the precise questions that you will be asked, hence, the need for adequate preparation so that success for you will be inevitable, and your good performance may be a stepping stone to a greater attainment.

Based on the interview experiences of team members, our team have put together regular ten interview questions and the suitable responses required from you, they are:

- Introduce yourself: This is usually the approach for opening any form of an interview.

Note: The candidate must understand that introduction must be brief; response must be significant within the circumstance and circumference of a Doctoral or Master interview.

The major highlights are essential: The overview of your Academic background, inspiration/motivation, and interests for the study. You are not expected to answer beyond these three areas.

- Why do you want to embark on or why do you consider going for the Doctoral or Master Degree program? This question requires a succinct and simple answer.

Note: Whether a Doctoral or Master Degree program, they are a bigger task that requires driving factor(s).

The major highlights are essential: Motivation for embarking on a Doctoral or Master program in a manner that presents your fervor and keenness for the area of study.
